

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A network management communication infrastructure is provided that supports in-fiber signaling amongst the network components residing in an optical transport network. The network management communication infrastructure introduces an optical media management channel into each of the optical fibers that resides in an optical transport network.